Struck by Train and Instantly Killed

Train No. 87 which arrives in Campbell shortly after 7 o'clock struck and killed a man about two miles up the track from here. The train was in charge of Conductor Francis, and Engineer Boughmaster. The Engineer saw the man on the track but not until it was too late to stop the engine before hitting him. The train was brought to a standstill and an investigation made revealing the mutilated body of a man strewn along the track. Dr. Merrill the S. P. physician here was telephoned for but upon being informed that the man was dead, advised that the body be taken to San Jose, which was done. The remains were so badly mutilated that identification from them was impossible but in the coat was found a letter signed by John Boyner, of Cypress Ave., Campbell, and addressed to Harry Wilborn.

Exactly how Wilborn came to be struck by the train will never be known, but it is supposed that he was under the influence of liquor and was either walking on the track, or perhaps lying asleep across the rails.

Wilborn had been around Campbell for about a year, working last summer in a local dry yard. He had been employed in the gravel pit lately by the S. P. Co. He has been living at the Nevada House, near the depot.

At the coroner's inquest held in San Jose Tuesday, the jury's verdict was simply "killed by a train." No one was held responsible for the accident.

It is said that Wilborn was once high in the government service on this coast in the Internal Revenue Department, but drank got the better of the man and he sank to a low degree in the social scale of humanity.

Will Lecture at Congregational Church

On Sunday night, March 24, at 7:30 at the Congregational Church, Mrs. Alice S. Wells will speak on the subject "Household Economics as a Crime Preventive." Mrs. Wells speaks under the auspices of the W. C. T. U. She comes highly recommended by press and public and the people of Campbell should take advantage of this opportunity to hear her.

Mrs. Wells is by ancestry, birth and training a civic and reform worker. She was pastor's assistant in Plymouth Church, Brooklyn. Interested in the social mission of the church she spent two years at Hartford Theological Seminary and School of Religious Pedagogy, preparing lectures in the Message of the Prophets for today which were later delivered at Chautauquas and Bible Conference. Deeply moved by the scientific study of crime in the light of applied Christianity, Mrs. Wells gave many addresses in its behalf and later applied for appointment as a regular police officer because as she puts it, "it is easier to talk about things than to do them." Her appointment being the first of its kind, and brought about by her own efforts, awakened not only national but international response, giving impetus to one more helpful movement of our day.

Concert a Success

The concert at the Congregational church last Friday evening was well attended by an appreciative audience. The numbers were all accorded an encore. Master Menhennick with his violin was the star of the evening, he showed phenomenal talent for one so young. The receipts swelled nicely the new parsonage fund.

The 13th Annual Saratoga Blossom Festival will be held next Saturday, March 23.

Assemblyman Bohnett Addresses Ladies' Club

The Country Woman's Club met in the reading room as usual. After a short business meeting, L. D. Bohnett our Assemblyman, from this district spoke to the Club on some of the laws that had been enacted at our last legislature. He first showed a sample ballot to be used at the primary election in May, and explained how to vote for the man desired for President, and for the presidential electors, who are appointed by the State central committee of each party. He then explained the various stages of the election process, until the man who had received the highest number of electoral votes, was declared elected President by the House of Representatives in Congress. He also told of the Initiative, Recall, and Referendum and what its opponents considered its weak points; the local option bill; the employers liability act; the short ballot; and some of the issues of the coming Presidential campaign. It was a very interesting and profitable afternoon and the Club was very glad that so many ladies responded to their invitation to enjoy the talk with them.

At the conclusion of the meeting, a rising vote of thanks was given Mr. Bohnett for his kindness, in taking the time of a busy man, to explain to the ladies of the Club and their friends their new duties as citizens.

Hageman, the color scheme was green as a reminder of St. Patrick's day, Irish potatoes and little Irish flags were much in evidence. After a program, consisting of vocal solos by the little Hageman girls and others, and a recitation by Mrs. R. Allison, a delicious lunch was served, among other good things were cakes trimmed with green. The afternoon passed much too quickly, when all wished the hospitable hostess and her "chum" many returns of such happy days, they leave an impression never to be forgotten.

Fatherly Comes to the Front With Some Remarks About Mamma's New Footstool.

"The only Christmas gift whose presence in the house I regret," said Mr. Fatherly, "is a footstool which our girls gave to mamma."

"Mother is not an old lady, but the girls thought it would be nice for her to have something to put her feet upon and then I think that as a sort of subsidiary idea they had a fancy that it would look well in the house."

"I am not familiar with footstool architecture and so I don't know of just what design this one is, whether it's a Louis XIV. or Louis V. or what; but I know it's built of mahogany, is oblong in shape, upholstered in green, has carved legs with claw feet and that for its size it is a pretty solid piece of furniture."

"On Christmas night when the girls put that footstool under mamma's feet 'Isn't that lovely?' they said, and mamma said it was perfectly beautiful and she sat with her feet on it for the rest of that evening. But she has never used it since; she isn't a footstool lady yet."

"Then the girls began setting that footstool around in our parlor or in our library, where they thought it would appear to advantage and where it would, by its presence, enhance the attractiveness of our outfit. It has been during this time, while the girls were placing the footstool around here and there to see how it would look, that I have become best acquainted with it by stubbing my toes against it."

"For, you see, it was new to me, and then, with the girls forever shifting it around, really it seemed as if I couldn't go anywhere in those two rooms without falling over that footstool."

"Just now the girls have got that footstool under the piano bench; they are trying to see how it looks there. The bench is of mahogany and it has curved legs and claw feet, like the footstool's, and in a way the two pieces of furniture do harmonize. I hope that this harmony will appeal to the girls strongly, and that there under the piano bench, for a long time they will let this curiously, one might almost say malignantly, obstructive footstool remain."

Pursuing Woman.

Whatever the law of man may attempt or achieve in the way of reforming the harmless, necessary bachelor, there is a higher natural law of quest and capture which—in the opinion of expert feministologists—the predatory woman rather than the comparatively timid and quiescent man fulfills. Nowadays woman is the pursuer, man is the pursued. The luckless wight who hopes to escape the mantraps and springs of matrimony has need of all his cunning; there is no safety but in retreat; he is no match for the devious cunning of the huntress who has marked the game for her own. Mr. Man may take refuge in splenetic lyrics about The Female of the Species, or The Vampire, but that is his sole satisfaction. The woman spins her web and smiles and is demure; she knows that he may fling his caustic epigram about The Serpent's Tongue, but—clever arachnoid that she is—she will have him at the last. She can afford to bide her time and be patient, for whether it be leap year or some other year, her net will enmesh him and he will grant whatever she desires, even to the extent of letting her vote or go to congress or be president.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Proof of the Man Shakespeare.

Sir Sidney Lee, the eminent Shakespearean scholar, indorses the conclusions of Ernest Law, who has endeavored to prove that certain documents in the public record office in London relating to Shakespeare, which were long supposed to be impudent forgeries, are, after all, genuine. The documents concern the production of some of Shakespeare's plays at the courts of Queen Elizabeth and King James. Sir Sidney remarked in a speech at the annual meeting of the Shakespeare birthday trustees that "the fact that in these documents Shakespeare is mentioned categorically as the poet which made the plays should be specially interesting, if a little disappointing to certain persons, who think that there is no genuine contemporary evidence of the existence of any such author."

Paris Women in Strange Headgear.

It is at such places as the Grand Guignol that one sees quaint clothes I went one night this week and saw some of the funniest headgear I have beheld anywhere.

One girl had a bonnet rather like the sort of thing a knight of old would have worn in a tournament. It was made of gold metal in a chain pattern and it completely covered her head right down to the nape of her neck.

Another had a Mother Hubbard cap trimmed with a wreath of scarlet flowers; another wore a high, pointed hat of old brocade trimmed with fur round the brim, and several wore bands of beads bordered with deep fringe, which hung all round the face after the fashion of a lampshade.—The Queen.

HAPPENINGS IN THE CITIES

Vanity Class Is Feature In School

NEW YORK.—A vanity class, it was revealed recently, has been started among the girls in Erasmus Hall High school, Brooklyn, as a part of the hygiene and gymnasium courses. It was originated by Catherine Turner, assistant principal, as a means of teaching the girls to take greater pride in their personal appearance and of impressing on them the fact that a girl who has plain features may make herself unusually attractive by displaying taste in dress, care of her teeth and hair, her complexion, carriage of shoulders, and the like. The pupils are urged to give heed to all those things, and they are examined in them just as they take examinations in algebra, arithmetic and English.

Miss Turner, who is active in evolving the new course, is a staunch believer in simple gowns. She insists that girls may be just as attractive in simple frocks as in silks, provided they pay attention to many other things and make it a point to appear neat. To the girls she has made it a point to explain the many things that are required to look fetching. She has given lectures on the care of the person, on harmony in dress, taste in the selection of materials, and on many other things.

The opportunity for giving more attention to those things has come because of the inability of all the classes to get as many hours, as set in the schedule, in the gymnasium every week. As the exercises are intended primarily to aid girls in improving their appearance, it was decided to devote an hour to the vanity class. The girls are gathered in the auditorium. Five of the most attractive girls are selected and sent on the stage in the full glare of the footlights. They are lined up and the students in the auditorium are asked to study the appearance of each of the girls, her teeth, her complexion, her figure, her hair, her feet, her dress, her method of standing and other details.

Aid is given to the observation powers of the girls by the teachers, who call attention to various parts of the girls' dress. After that has been done the pupils are required to vote on the appearance of the girls. The main points considered are the figure, teeth, hair and feet. Different girls are inspected every week.

Farmer Boy Buncos City Firemen

CHICAGO.—Whether Frank Anderson came from Wheeler, Ind., or whether he didn't, he succeeded in working a "skin game" on scores of members of the city fire department that would do credit to the most experienced and skillful of Chicago confidence men, and now the firemen are looking up Wheeler, Ind., on the map. To their relief they find that Wheeler, Ind., is really so. This is the only thing they have found to be true about Frank Anderson, however, and in fact they are beginning to doubt that he is Frank Anderson at all and may be somebody else—whose latter suspicion the police concur in.

Frank is a stolid, healthy-looking country lad, with rosy cheeks. He went around to the various fire houses and told his story.

"I live back on a farm near Wheeler, Ind.," he would say, "where my ma has 3,000 chickens and 19 cows. We got a totable sized farm back there. I came to Chicago to find my Aunt Jane, but run out o' finances and I calculate as how I'll have to hoof it back. If one of you gentlemen will assist me in getting back home I'll send you more than I borrowed in eggs and butter."

Jerome Connor, a salesman, who happened to be in the quarters of engine company No. 5, 326 South Jefferson street, listened and saw visions of omelettes. He bought $2 worth of eggs. Members of the engine company brought the donation up to $10, and Frank took the names of all.

As he was leaving one engine house after having made an extremely successful plea, he asked one of the men whether he preferred "Plymouth Rock" eggs or the "Jersey" kind. Several days later he was relating the incident to some friends, and inquiring about "Jersey" chickens.

When he was told the truth he sent a message over the wire to all of the fire houses warning the men against purchasing eggs and butter from Frank Anderson.

"Too late. We've waited so long for them eggs I guess they're all spoiled," was the answer that came back in nearly every instance.

Wireless Used by Cupid On Steamer

SAN FRANCISCO.—A prank of Cupid with the wireless aboard the Pacific Mail liner Mongolia the other day basely betrayed to an indulgent world afloat and ashore the plan of Lieut. Edmund Spence Root of the navy to marry Miss Maude May Radcliffe, daughter of E. F. Radcliffe, electrical manufacturer of Portland, Ore., and to surprise his relatives and friends with the news.

The Mongolia was plowing serenely toward San Francisco when the god of love began to get busy with the key of the wireless apparatus. Other vessels far at sea and a few of the land stations received the persistent call of the Mongolia's operator, but the receiving stations did not pay much attention until the words "marriage license" clicked forth in the dispatch leaving the Mongolia's aerials. The aerogram was addressed to Miss Radcliffe at the Palace hotel, and after a few phrases, important only to the parties directly involved, explained that the liner would not arrive until late, and that unless a license were procured Saturday a wedding could not take place in San Francisco.

The lieutenant was hurrying home from the Asiatic station, under orders to report at once to Washington, so Miss Radcliffe used the more discreet and secretive telephone to beg Grant Munson, marriage license clerk, to hold the office open until the Mongolia arrived. The gallant Munson did even better—he promised to return to his office and issue the license at any time she and her fiancé should appear.

At 7:30 o'clock the officer and the girl were at the official trying place and soon were in possession of the coveted permit. The lieutenant gave his address as Cincinnati, O., but explained that the residence was purely theoretical, he having a sister living in that city. Miss Radcliffe gave her address as Portland, Ore., where the navy man first courted her.

Lieutenant Root soon located a minister who tied the knot.

Zoo Keeper Says Lions Are Alienists

NEW YORK.—"Bill" Snyder, head keeper at the Central Park menagerie, has qualified as an alienist.

"Bill" never graduated from a college, or served on an asylum's staff, but when a man named Fulberg tried to break into the lion cage, Snyder said at once he was crazy. How did he know? Because "Bill" says the lions always try to make friends with an insane person.

"Yep, I've never seen it fail yet," said "Bill." "Whenever a crazy man gets near a lion, the animal just naturally comes up close to the bars and tries to be a good fellow. He will wag his tail and purr like a cat. It's wonderful, but it's so. Why, I once knew a crazy man to take a lion's food away from the brute, and the animal seemed to be trying to smile about the joke."

"What do you suppose makes a lion so friendly with a crazy man?" "Bill" was asked.

"I never tried to figure it out, but I imagine it's because when a man goes crazy his animal nature comes

"I wish I could be put on some lunacy commission. I would bring the subject down here, take him up to the lion cage and mightily soon find out if he is sane or not. It would save the state and city a whole lot of money, as they wouldn't have to hold a suspect under observation more than long enough to bring him to me."

"Is the lion the only animal that tries to become acquainted with lunatics?" "Bill" was asked.

"No, they all do in some way or another. For instance, the monkey makes an effort to search for fleas, and the elephant tries to give the person a ride."

TO BID DEFIANCE TO MOTH

French Scientist Comes Forward With News That Will Please All Lovers of Furs.

Every owner of a nice fur coat or a set of furs, knows what is going to happen to the fur if you give the moth just half a chance. The fur will be ruined. Moth-proof bags, camphor balls, cedar chests, storage houses and other rough-on-moths devices have done much toward protecting valuable furs from year to year, but sooner or later the ever-watchful moth may get the chance she is waiting for and then, one gentle shake and the fur will begin to fly.

According to Cosmos, a French scientist has discovered how to make fur coats, muffs and complete fur sets in such a way that no moth will ever touch them. He is going to give us skinless furs, that is, furs from which the natural skin has been removed entirely.

It may surprise a great many readers of this page to learn that moths are not fond of fur after all. As a matter of fact, it is only the skin to which the fur is attached that attracts the uninvited pest.

The idea, therefore, has suggested itself to one mind sufficiently bold to make the step, to substitute some other material not adapted as food for vermin in place of the natural skin.

The following is the method adopted: The fur is stretched upon a wooden frame and is then dipped, hair side down, in a flat dish, the dish being filled with water and placed with the fur in a refrigerating room and allowed to freeze. When the fur is frozen to a solid block the skin is sawed off with a circular saw. It can be further utilized for the manufacture of leather. The surface of the ice block is allowed to melt down a small distance so as to bring out the ends of the hairs, and then a number of layers of rubber solution are applied. After this has set the ice block is melted off, leaving the hair firmly seated in the rubber. The product so obtained perfectly resembles natural fur in appearance, but differs from it in being quite unassailable by vermin.

CAN PRINT WITHOUT INK

Wonderful Possibility of the Future, if English Inventor Is Not Over-Sanguine.

It is very possible that before long newspapers will be printed without the use of printing ink. Even the colored supplements are to be printed without ink. A German publication, Die Welt der Technik, devoted to scientific matters and inventions, credits the discovery of the inkless printing process to an English inventor.

In the course of some electrical experiments, it says, he accidentally pressed a coin, which had fallen on the table and was rolling off, against a metallic plate covered with a piece of paper, and at the same time against an insulated electric line. To his amazement he saw a sepi print of the coin impressed upon the paper. This happened about twelve years ago. Since then the inventor has followed up this observation, and has now developed a process for printing without printing ink. He uses dry paper impregnated with certain chemicals, whose nature is not disclosed.

In the process of printing the paper travels over a metal plate and the type is applied on the opposite side, a current of electricity passing through the paper. According to the particular metal used for the substratum, and according to the mode of impregnation of the paper, a great variety of different colors can be produced, so that multi-color printing becomes an easy matter.

BLIND MASSEURS THE BEST

Delicacy of Their Sense of Touch Makes Them of Great Value in This Branch of Healing.

An organization of blind masseurs has opened in Paris for treatment by massage. The Lancet calls attention to the fact that this work for the blind opens a profitable means of livelihood for a class of persons to whom professional openings have hitherto been very limited.

In consequence of the extreme delicacy of their sense of touch, the Lancet points out, the blind succeed in an exceptional manner in this occupation.

Many mineral-water resorts, such as Vichy, Urriage, Plombieres, Neris, Chatel-Guyon, Bourbonne and Bourbon l'Archambault, possess experienced blind masseurs, both male and female.

In Japan massage is in point of fact a monopoly for the blind, so well known that the same word designates both masseur and blind.

As the experiments at French watering places have proved favorable for them, under French government patronage a special course of massage for the blind has been instituted, which is in charge of a blind medical man, Dr. Fabre.

NAVAJOS' ART STILL LIVES

ON THE WARPATH—

BARNEY MOKER

UNLIKE many of the arts and crafts of the American Indian, the work of the Navajo silversmith and other artisans is showing no deterioration. In fact those who are in a position to judge state that some of the modern examples of native silversmithing on the Navajo reservation are superior in every way to the best examples of earlier work of the redskinned craftsmen of the forge.

At the fourth annual fair of Navajo Indians, which was held recently, there was a dazzling display of this native silverware, showing the native artists at their best. Probably $5,000 worth of Navajo jewelry was on exhibition, most of it being made up in purely native designs. The prize collection was the work of Chis-chille (Curly Hair), a silversmith who lives near the trading post of Two Gray Hills, fifty miles south of Shiprock, N. M. Chis-chille is a middle-aged Indian, who has been a silversmith since his youth. In fact his is a family of silversmiths, the trade being handed down from father to son, such as trades are handed down in some European communities.

Chis-chille, like other Navajo silversmiths, uses only the crudest implements in making his silverware. His forge is a square of stones and adobe, the center having a round depression for a fireplace. The smoke is carried off and a draft created by two wooden tubes, covered with adobe to keep from burning, walled to the rear of the forge. His bellows is made of sheepskin, and his anvil is a hard stone or a piece of iron. Any silversmith who can get a piece of railroad iron is looked upon with envy by his fellow-craftsmen who must use forges of cruder material. The crucibles for melting silver are of hard clay, and are generally about the size of tumblers, with round bottoms, and with curved rims provided with spouts for pouring off the molten metal.

The molds which are used by the native silversmiths are generally cut out of hard sandstone, and are greased with mutton tallow. Charcoal is used for fuel, the Indians being very clever at making it from juniper logs. Generally the smith's blowpipe is a piece of hollow brass tubing. For polishing he uses sandstone and ashes, and for chasing and engraving unique designs on the silverware he uses nothing more than pocketknives, awls and small files.

With such implements the Navajo silversmith has been working for the last sixty years, there being no record of silversmithing in the tribe previous to that date. The Indians do not care for more elaborate implements but cling to the tools with which they have been familiar for years. The effects they secure with these crude implements are nothing short of amazing, the chasing on some of the Navajo silverware being equal to the better grade of work turned out of high-grade jewelry establishments.

There is no reason to believe that the Navajos learned silversmithing from the early Spaniards, as many people believe. The Spanish explorers were inveterate keepers of diaries and other records. Nothing escaped their observation, and if they had found silversmiths among the Navajo tribe—at that time even more warlike than the Apache—there is every reason to believe that some record would have been made of the fact. It is likely that the craft was learned from the Mexicans at a later era, and it has continued to grow in importance until it rivals the blanket-making industry for which the tribe has become world-famous.

While the blanket weaving is strictly a woman's occupation among the Navajo people, silversmithing is kept as strictly among the men. A woman silversmith has never been heard of among the Navajos, nor is there any record of a male rug weaver, though among the Hopis and other southwestern tribes, the men do most of the weaving.

The Navajo silversmiths do not use silver bullion for their work. They prefer silver coins, for the reason that the minted silver has the right proportion of alloy to make enduring ornaments. Mexican dollars, which command only their bullion value, are generally used, these are melted and run into the various molds, and, after a laborious process of polishing and chasing, come out as finished ornaments.

The art of the Navajo silversmith is nowhere shown to better advantage than in the manufacture of the silver necklaces which are worn by men and women and which form the most elaborate and costly pieces of Navajo jewelry. These necklaces consist of beads of silver, ranging from the size of a pea to globules an inch in diameter. The larger beads are finished with pendant-like projections, cleverly graduated as to size. The larger beads, with these pendants, hang on the breast, and generally a very striking effect is secured by alternating the beads with turquoise or bits of coral. The cost of such a necklace varies according to the workmanship represented in the beads and the value of the coral or turquoise that is used to set off the silver.

Most of the articles made by the Navajo silversmiths are sold to members of the tribe, for probably no other people in the world have such a fondness for jewelry, especially of massive design. The Navajo likes plenty of precious metal in his jewelry. The wire bracelets and rings are all right for the Americans who stray across the reservation, but the Navajo wears five or six heavy silver rings, with turquoise settings, a bracelet or two, sometimes four or five inches in width and correspondingly heavy, a belt of huge silver discs about his waist, a massive silver necklace on his breast, elaborate silver mountings on his bridle, jacket buttons made of dimes, and huge turquoise earrings dangling from the lobes of his ears. These, with the inevitable Navajo blanket, about his shoulders, go a long way toward making the Navajo a strikingly picturesque figure.

HAD HIGH OPINION OF TURKS

Gen. Miles in Eulogy of the Fighting Force Put in the Field by Sultan's Empire.

During the spring of 1897 the war between Turkey and Greece broke out and Gen. Nelson A. Miles was ordered to Europe to observe the military operations. His opinion of the Turkish army he gives in his book, "Serving the Republic." "The Turkish army, which we hear less about than any other, is a well organized, disciplined army, numbering at that time 700,000 effective men. It is trained to look upon the sultan as the spiritual head of their religion on earth. This has the effect on the mind of the Turk of inspiring the belief that in serving his sultan he is serving his God. There is certainly one advantage in their religion, in that it maintains absolute sobriety. The use of liquor is abhorrent to the Mohammedan, and results in their army being an absolutely temperate organization. The personnel of their army is made up of strong men, and their military establishment is conducted with great economy."

"I had an audience with the sultan and was cordially received by the high officials of the Turkish army. The manner of his assuming sovereign power, the fact of his keeping his elder brother a prisoner in a palace just above Constantinople on the Bosphorus for over twenty years, had prejudiced me somewhat before meeting him. On seeing him I found a man of small stature, keen, sharp face, cold, black, cruel eyes, black hair and full beard. In conversation I found him thoroughly familiar with military affairs and deeply interested in the condition of his army.

Parisians Evidently Honest.

An astute rogue who hoped to make his fortune by speculating on the petty dishonesty sometimes latent in otherwise respectable people has had an unprofitable experience in Paris. The swindler haunted the streets in the neighborhood of the opera, which swarm with work-girls during the luncheon hour, and dropped here and there envelopes bearing an Orleans address. In each envelope was a note asking a "friend" to redeem for $4.50 at an address he gave a gold purse value $53. Instead of the expected haul the swindler found to his disgust that almost all the letters were sent on to him by the finders, while none had attempted to obtain the purse.

Bother the Button!

All know the annoying habit buttons have of coming off at a moment when they are most needed, says "Answers." It seems sometimes as though nothing short of wire thread will keep them in their places; and even wire breaks away from the cloth.

When next you are sewing on a button, follow these directions, and that button will never trouble you again.

Place your button, take a hairpin—a strong one—and lay it across the button, then sew it over the hairpin. When you have put as much thread through the eyes as they will hold, withdraw the hairpin. Then push the needle through near the button, pull the button up, and wrap the thread several times round between the button and garment. Fasten the thread on the under side of the button, and then you will find that that button will stay on until the garment is worn out.

KEEP TRIBAL CUSTOMS

SARCEE INDIANS DISREGARD MARCH OF TIME.

History, Intended for Posterity, Still Is Recorded in Crude Fashion on the Hides of Steers—Old Men Tell of Adventures.

Within twelve miles of Calgary, a city of 50,000 people, and with telephone communication with that city, the Sarcee Indians pursue their life and observe exactly as their forefathers did the ancient habits and customs of their tribe, says the Toronto Globe.

Two years ago there was a great festival at which seven of the oldest chiefs related the stories of their exploits, which the painter of the tribe preserved for posterity on two immense steer hides. These hides are now carefully preserved at the office of the agent on the Sarcee reserve.

The Indian lad relies for his history on campfire stories and a well-tanned steer hide covered with queer characters, painted crudely with a sort of ink made of the juices of plants.

These records are not haphazard, but they are not altogether regular. When several chiefs and medicine men of the tribe are growing old an assembly is arranged where the famous Indian interpreter and painter meets the aged men. One by one the old men stand forth before the people and recount the stories of their lives.

They tell thrilling tales of the battles in which they have fought, of the scalps taken, and the horses they have stolen. These three achievements are regarded as the three most honorable and valorous exploits of the great men. Compared with these the white man's election to parliament, his appointment to high office, and his great commercial achievements are as nothing.

Sometimes their meetings last several days. The old men are enthusiastic in their descriptions of bygone days; they recite rapidly and gesticulate much. The members of the tribe, sitting about them, listen eagerly, storing the details to be told over and over again to their sons' sons, until they are tribal traditions of the long past. As they talk the painter sits upon the ground with his steady hand spread before him and paints with his rude dyes pictures to illustrate the incidents.

A circle represents a barricade or encampment; awkwardly drawn pictures of animals stand for the horses he has stolen; a galloping horse, with a man on his back, suggests the story of a wild flight across the prairie before pursuing enemies; a flag may mean a bloody battle won; a tadpole-like mark, a scalped Indian. The figures are very crude, the drawings no better than those a four-year-old child makes on its slate. But some ingenuity is exercised in the grouping, and each sketch is, in a way, a key to the thrilling tales which in time become history.

Dog Under Arrest.

A dog thief—not a dog stealer, but a dog which had been trained to steal—has been arrested by the French police. He was caught "en flagrant delict," we read, when he was in the act of stealing a pair of lady's shoes from an establishment in Noisy-le-Sec. His procedure was so cunning that it left no doubt among the police that the dog's was no "untutored mind."

Nothing could be drawn from the animal at the police office, so it was decided to shut him up without food. After some hours confinement the dog was released and a police cyclist was in readiness to follow the dog home. But the "best laid schemes of mice and men gang aft agley."

The dog when liberated instead of rushing home deliberately walked to the other side of the road, and there sat down on a doorstep and awaited events, every now and again throwing suspicious glances at the police in waiting. Finding that there was no chance of the dog going home he was again taken into the police office and sent to the fourriere, where he met an untimely end.

American Aids.

A woman recently back from foreign parts has a grievance against the way in which military bands there play American airs, states the New York Press. To begin with, says this woman, two-thirds of the bands and orchestras of Europe think "Dixie" is the national air, and this mistake is not difficult to comprehend, as applause generally greets this tune. Next in popularity comes "Columbia, Gem of the Ocean," and, strange to say, then comes "Old Dan Tucker."

No amount of expostulation avails to change this notion. "The Star Spangled Banner" is reserved for solemn occasions, and it must be confessed Americans are not wildly enthusiastic over it. Not one in a thousand remembers three lines of the verses, not even the school children who shout them every day. "Maryland" is popular, but the tune is that of the old Presbyterian hymn, "Beulah Land," and may be heard wherever Scotch and English folks gather.

Heard in a Newspaper Office.

"Honesty is the best policy." "I wish I could believe it, but I have in mind the woman who sent in an advertisement reading like this: 'Wanted—A husband with money; object alimony.' Did she get an answer to her advertisement? Not one."

Cooking the 'Possum.

Mayor Bryan Callaghan of San Antonio, Tex., is very fond of 'possum and is particular about the way it is prepared for the table. He gives the following directions:

"Never plunge a 'possum into boiling water. That hardens the flesh and makes it tough. First bleed the 'possum, and after it is drawn immerse it in a pot of cold water and bring the water to a boil. After being parboiled for a reasonable time, take it out, put some laurel leaves, a little oil and some chili peppers inside it and pack in ice and put aside for a day or two.

"When ready to be cooked, put it into a bake pan and surround with sweet potatoes, brown to a turn and you have a dish that is about as delicious as any that can be prepared."

Absorb Water Through the Skin. Experiments have been made with frogs which tend to show that those animals rapidly absorb water through the pores of the skin. Emphasis is laid by certain authorities upon the fact that frogs never take water by the mouth. On being exposed for several hours to dry air some frogs experimented with lost 14 per cent. of their weight, but this was nearly all regained within 24 hours when they were placed in a dish containing water only one centimeter in depth.

Pioneer Tobacco Growers.

The original planters of fine tobacco in Honduras were Cubans, who brought their seed and methods of curing, and with favorable soil, climate, and labor conditions were successful, their tobacco taking first prize in several international exhibitions; quantities were exported to Cuba and sold as Habana tobacco. These planters became well to do and retired.

"I had hemorrhages and at times could not get any medicine to stop them. I got in such a weak condition that I would have died if I had not got relief soon.

"Several women who had taken your Compound, told me to try it and I did and found it to be the right medicine to build up the system and overcome female troubles.

Small Boy as Conservationist.

A lecturer before a suburban woman's club raised his voice with emphatic confidence. "I venture to assert," he said, "that there isn't one in this audience who realizes the importance of the conserving of our forests, not one who has ever done anything to prevent the destruction of our forests." A small boy who had accompanied his mother to the lecture interrupted in a high, childish voice. "I once shot a woodpecker," he said.

SELECTED QUEER PETS

GRIZZLY BEAR CUBS TRAINED BY TRAPPER.

Amusing and Playful After Their Capturer Had Conquered the Call of the Wild—As Easy to Train As Any Dog.

One day while wandering in the pine woods on the slope of Mount Meeker I came upon two young grizzly bears. Though they dodged about as lively as chickens, I at last cornered them in a penlike pocket of fallen trees.

Getting them into a sack was one of the liveliest experiences I ever had. Though small and almost starved, these little orphans proceeded to "chew me up" after the manner of big grizzlies, as is told of them in books. After an exciting chase and tussle I would catch one and thrust him into the sack. In resisting he would insert his claws into my clothes, or thrust them through the side of the sack; then, while I was trying to tear him loose, or to thrust him forcibly in, he would lay hold of a finger, or take a bite in my leg. Whenever he bit I at once dropped him, and then all began over again.

Their mother had been killed a few days before I found them; so, of course, they were famished and in need of a home; but so bitterly did they resist my efforts that I barely succeeded in taking them. Though hardly as large as a collie when he is at his prettiest, they were nimble athletes.

At last I started home, the sack over my shoulder, with these lively Ursus horribilis in the bottom of it. Their final demonstration was not needed to convince me of the extraordinary power of their jaws. Nevertheless, while going down a steep slope one managed to bite into my back through sack and clothes, so effectively that I responded with a yell. Then I fastened the sack at the end of a long pole, which I carried across my shoulder, and I was able to travel the remainder of the distance to my cabin without another attack in the rear.

Of course the youngsters did not need to be taught to eat. I simply pushed their noses down into a basin of milk, and the little red tongues at once began to ply; then raw eggs and bread were dropped into the basin. There was no hesitation between courses; they simply gobbled the food as long as I kept it before them.

Jenny and Johnny were pets before sundown. Though both were alert, Johnny was the wiser and more cheerful of the two. He took training as readily as a collie or shepherd dog, and I have never seen any dog more playful. All bears are keen of wit, but he was the brightest one of the wild folk that I have ever known. He grew rapidly, and ate me almost out of supplies. We were intimate friends in less than a month, and I spent much time playing and talking with him. One of the first things I taught him was, when hungry, to stand erect with arms extended almost horizontally, with palms forward. I also taught him to greet me in this manner.—From the Spell of the Rockies, by Enos A. Mills.

"Dark Stars."

Scattered through space are innumerable stars that give forth very little light or heat. Either they were never, at any period of their history, bright and glowing like the myriad stars that make the midnight sky so beautiful, or in the course of countless ages the heat they once possessed has radiated away from them into the depth of space, and now they are, as their name describes them, "dark stars."

Craig's Crazes.

Gordon Craig, who interlards his sapient utterances with more than the average man's nonsensical lapses, perpetrates this:

"I take an entirely common sense view of the man and his motives. He simply succeeded in performing in two months a task that has been tried in every court in Europe for centuries. He set out to cleanse social and official life of its moral grime and its degeneracy. He set about his task with direct purpose, and with the full enthusiasm of a young, virile, and cruelly wronged man. His ideas were logical, and he reasoned and thought out every movement and act during that brief time of storm and stress that ended in tragedy. That is my idea of Hamlet."

Apropos of which the Nation tartly remarks:

"If that really is Mr. Craig's notion of Hamlet, there does not seem to be much reason why he should be encouraged to promulgate it. What fatality is it that condemns so many enthusiastic stage reformers to be 'reakish'?"
